

JAZIRAT AT TA'IR VOLCANO, YEMEN

Life is full of surprises, and no more so than here on the good ship called Van Gogh! In addition to the countries and places described in our cruise itinerary, we pass by many other interesting sights and attractions. Tonight was a spectacular example, and what a unique surprise.

We sailed along the coast of the Yemen, and hey presto, there was Jazirat At Ta'ir - a real live volcano in full flow. As it was already dark, the erupting lava was a vivid red against the night sky, as were the flows of lava from the caldera all the way down to the sea. Our ship's Master thoughtfully altered the course of the ship so that we could get a closer and fuller look. The ship's photographer Andrea took some excellent photographs, which you will all see when we get home to Wales.

The last world cruise was excellent in so many ways, and this cruise is equally as interesting and exciting!
